Coverdale College in the South City is a $100,000 new TD Bank Financial Group and will use the funds to improve health care education.

The money will be used to build facilities for students in health care programs and also help establish the new Centre for Integrative and Learning in Health Care.

Health Minister James Watson said the $100,000 donation is a great example of how the private sector can help build the new Centre for Integrative and Learning in Health Care.

"The business will invest more people have the resources to provide an education in health care," said Watson.

The money will be used to build facilities for students in health care programs and also help establish the new Centre for Integrative and Learning in Health Care.

Halloween Bash sexy and scary

Conestoga Students Inc. held the 1 annual Halloween Bash at the new Sanctuary for the first time on Oct. 25. Students really got into the spirit when choosing their costumes. Some were very unique and original — one student even came as a night table. Four first year nursing students came dressed as naughty and nice. All students had one thing in common, a smile on the 1 face.

Mind your own business when it comes to religion

When you were taught about religion? What is right and what is wrong?

I have always wondered why some people get so angry about the fact that we all believe in different things and just start to be more judgmental about each other.

It is especially hard to understand why people like to lecture with only people's beliefs. One person is really angry about a few others. He says we can be what other people believe and I say of your business belief.

What I find really interesting is arguing with someone about religion through the Internet.

It is so much easier for people to come their opinion online. This will really not connect you to another person and try to "take them" because they believe, but I have been in some through the Internet.

The Internet makes someone feel that someone is not just personal as it allows people to try things they would never say to someone's face.

Everyone has been through at least a small battle when people and politics come and selling others they are easy for believing what they do.

Helen Clark

Opinion

Believing what they believe.

But these individuals think that they are going to win because "You that I was wrong you fight about religion. What was they trying to prove?" I know you have reading what people had to say that we are now going to connect my body to change their beliefs.

I know just from reading what people had to say that that no one was going to convince anybody to change their beliefs.

With everything that is going on in this world I would have respect of people to be strong something more professional with each other. We live in a busy world where things are constantly changing but I can tell you when it comes to religion it is always people not being going to stop believing in what they believe. So show some respect of their own beliefs.

We all feel the same way when we get attacked — offended, angry and hurt.

This is not a new way where there are individuals from all religions that think others is not just Christians and Muslims — Buddhists, Hindus, Jews and Muslims, just to name a few all get attacked as well.

We need to learn to be tolerant, understanding and understand why. We all feel the same way when we get attacked — offended, angry and hurt.

I have seen students and Christians about on Facebook groups that they seem to be less open to the world, and I can understand why they were using this.

Most of the time it starts where someone doubts that they want to even understand someone that I believe they thing back to me to tell the same thing they have in a 3 min.

I am not saying that constructive dialogue between religions and Christians is bad but some people need to leave the difference between debate and attack. Religion, not a convincing people into faith.

Because it is so easy to say what we want on the Internet you are a lot more likely to people than before. Sometimes through the discussion benefits of some of these groups. I have decided to find people online others "talking" from the day we started the

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

It is important to cultivate the healthy attitudes and behaviours between you and your partner which contribute to a happy, fulfilling relationship. Healthy relationships do not always come naturally, for your bond to continue to grow, you must continually work toward developing healthy patterns.

Here are some characteristics of a healthy relationship:

You are able to be an individual apart from the other

Neither depends on the other to feel important

Each of you can accept the fact that neither is perfect and maturity to change with other

Each of you continues to grow in other areas of your life: family, school, and friends

Each of you gets as much joy from giving the other as from receiving

The relationship remains an exciting, painful, difficult times as in happy times

There is honesty, trust, and respect between you

If you have any more questions about relationships, remember to the Counseling Clinic would be happy to talk with you. Drop in to make an appointment at Student Campus, Room 1A-005 (New England 5th Floor) 781-5223 ext. 3362, South Campus Admin Office 524-0390 ext. 145 or Waterloo Campus, Room 1C-04 844-0380 ext. 254.
